

INNOVATIVE SPIRIT

At Ozarks Technical Community College, bright ideas fuel our mission to provide life-changing educational opportunities to the region. And it's this innovative spirit — a vivid and lasting light — that transforms the futures of our students, college and community.

Throughout the pages of our 2016 annual report, you will find artwork that reflects these themes of innovation. Light bulbs — comprised of triangles — represent the bright ideas that build our success. While triangles, considered the strongest geometric shape, represent the strength behind these ideas. ▼ Chancellor Hal Higdon received a standing ovation at his 10th anniversary celebration in August.

A MESSAGE FROM THE CHANCELLOR

CONNECT WITH OTC

t Ozarks Technical Community College, innovation is the key to our success. That is why – in our 25th year of offering life-changing educational opportunities – we have been named one of the top 150 community colleges in the nation by the prestigious Aspen Institute.

This accomplishment is the direct result of our dedicated faculty, staff and board. Their tireless work ensures that every student who passes through our doors has the opportunity to experience limitless achievement. And when our students achieve their potential, incredible stories begin to take shape.

Throughout the pages of our 2016 annual report, you will read these stories firsthand. You will discover how one of our students turned her love for animals into her dream job as a zookeeper. You will learn about a student veteran who used his military knowledge and skills to earn a fire science degree. You will marvel at the success of another student who turned a class project into his own, thriving business. And you will cheer for a single mother who broke barriers and defied odds to earn her dental hygiene degree.

The year 2016 marked my 10th at the helm of OTC. And, as I reflect on the past decade, it is truly remarkable to think about the college's significant accomplishments. Not only have we expanded our programs, courses, and workforce training opportunities, but we have also strengthened our resources and funding. None of this was done alone. The college's success stems from a shared vision between our founding members, community leaders and you.

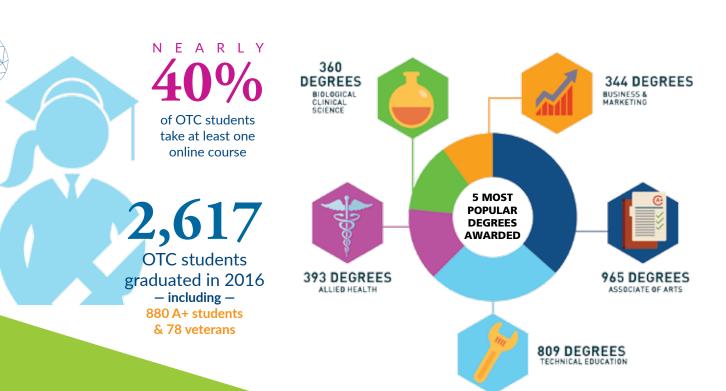

In November, I lost my wife, Nancy, to ovarian cancer. Nancy was an accounting instructor with a passion for education. She believed that any person who had the desire to learn should be given the opportunity. To honor Nancy's memory and continue her legacy of helping others on their educational journey, my family established a memorial scholarship. The overwhelming support Nancy's scholarship has received has touched our hearts. On behalf of my family, I want to thank each of you. The kindness this community has shown our family will never be forgotten.

I also want to take this opportunity to thank you for sharing your time, knowledge and resources with OTC. The college's successes and accolades would not be possible without your unwavering support. I like to think of OTC as the economic engine of southwest Missouri, and your support serves as the fuel that keeps our engine running. Because of you, we've made it this far. And because of you, we look forward to a bright and promising future.

Sincerely,

Hal L. Digdon

Chancellor

OTC named Aspen Institute Finalist

January 28, 2016

The Aspen Institute College Excellence Program named OTC one of 150 finalists to compete for the 2017 Aspen Prize for Community College Excellence and $1 million in prize funds. OTC was one of just two Missouri community colleges recognized by the Aspen Institute. This is the second time in three rounds OTC has been selected in the top 150.

The Aspen Prize, awarded every two years, recognizes institutions for outstanding student outcomes in four areas: student learning; certificate and degree completion; employment and earnings; and access and success for minority and low-income students.

"At OTC, we believe that if our students succeed then the community succeeds," said Chancellor Hal Higdon. "This recognition from the highly respected Aspen Institute is a great honor."

OTC honors Johnny Morris with Excellence in Business Award

March 24, 2016

Johnny Morris, founder/CEO of Bass Pro Shops, was the 2016 recipient of OTC's Excellence in Business Award. Chancellor Hal Higdon presented the award to Morris before an overflowing crowd at the White River Conference Center.

During the ceremony, Mark Miller, college director of communications and marketing, led a conversation with Morris. The two discussed the Bass Pro Shops founder's love of fishing, conservation and family. Morris looked back on the humble beginnings of Bass Pro Shops, and publicly thanked his team of employees. Morris credited his success to a "pioneering spirit" that exists within the company.

Morris founded Bass Pro Shops in 1971 when he began to sell premium fishing tackle in his father's liquor store. By 1974, Morris was printing and mailing the first Bass Pro Shops catalog. In 1978, he introduced Bass Tracker, the first boat, motor and trailer package designed exclusively for anglers. Tracker has remained America's No. 1 selling fishing boat for more than 35 years. Today, Bass Pro Shops is America's leading outdoor retailer with stores across the United States and Canada. Morris recently purchased rival outdoor retailer Cabela's.

Morris, a conservation advocate, has supported numerous initiatives including fish and wildlife habitat improvements, conservation and outdoor skills education, and lake and spring water quality improvements. In addition to Bass Pro Shops and Tracker Marine Group, Morris owns Big Cedar Lodge, Integrity Hills, Dogwood Canyon Nature Park and Top of the Rock.

More than 700 OTC graduates walked in the 2016 commencement ceremony held at JQH Arena.

OTC conferred 3,428 degrees and certificates to graduates, which included students who completed their course work from the summer 2015 semester through the spring 2016 semester.

Jeff Houghton, Emmy Awardwinning host of the local, late-night talk show "The Mystery Hour," was the featured commencement speaker. The comedian's message for the graduates was "keep not quitting."

"The dream you have in your heart doesn't come with a road map, it comes with a machete," said Houghton. "Those surprises that life throws at you may feel like dead ends, but they aren't. Just get out of your car, grab your machete, step into the forest, and hack yourself a new path."

OTC also honored local entrepreneur Jennifer Smith owner of the Traveling Chef as the 2016 Distinguished Alumna of the Year. OTC commemorates Chancellor Higdon's 10th anniversary at the college August 23, 2016

College officials, students, employees and community leaders celebrated Dr. Hal Higdon's 10th anniversary as president and chancellor of Ozarks Technical Community College. A brief ceremony featured reflections from the college's President Emeritus Dr. Norman K. Myers, as well as remarks from Board of Trustees Chairman Chip Sheppard and Trustee Larry Snyder.

Dr. Higdon began his career at Ozarks Technical Community College on July 5, 2006. College officials and administrators credit many of the college's significant milestones to his visionary leadership and guidance.

"OTC has thrived under the innovative and steady leadership of Dr. Higdon," said Sheppard. "As a life-long resident of Springfield, it has been rewarding to watch the college's growth and positive impact in our local community."

In the past decade, Dr. Higdon helped boost OTC's significance with area employers by expanding the college's workforce training opportunities and Allied Health programs. Enrollment enjoyed a steady increase under his tenure with a peak of 15,179 students in 2011 — an increase of 9.1 percent from the previous year. In total, the college's enrollment has grown more than 44 percent under his tenure.

"Dr. Higdon believes the college should run based on what the community needs," Snyder said. "When we hired him 10 years ago, his only promise was that he would come in, listen to the community, listen to the board, and lead change where change was needed."

The past 10 years have also brought about new campuses, centers and capital improvements. The OTC Richwood Valley Campus opened in 2007 and the OTC Lebanon Center followed in 2011. The OTC Table Rock Campus and OTC Waynesville Center opened in 2013. That same year, the college's Allied Health department unveiled a simulation lab at the Springfield campus to serve more than 600 students across 13 programs.

Throughout his tenure, Dr. Higdon worked to strengthen the college's resources and funding. When he arrived at the college, the OTC Foundation had $500,000 in assets; today, it has more than $5 million. Dr. Higdon built relationships between Missouri's community colleges and lawmakers in Jefferson City to help make state appropriations for two-year colleges a priority. He also brought the many challenges faced by community colleges into focus for state and national leaders.

"I consider myself fortunate to have worked at this fine institution for the last decade," Dr. Higdon said. "I'm especially proud of our dedicated faculty and staff who work so hard to help our students achieve their goals."

The 10th annual OTC Foundation Golf Tournament at Hickory Hills Country Club brought a record number of players together for one common goal: supporting OTC students. The 28 teams of four, along with event sponsors, raised more than $17,000 for student scholarships.

"More than 60 percent of our students qualify for some form of financial aid, and providing scholarships through the OTC Foundation is critical to meeting that need," said Stephanie Sumners, chief of staff/executive director of the OTC Foundation. "Financial aid is often the deciding factor in whether or not a student can attend college. The money raised by the annual golf tournament helps us provide these students with the financial support they need to earn a degree."

Since the tournament's inception 10 years ago, players and sponsors have helped raise more than $100,000 for student scholarships.

"I enjoyed conversing one-on-one with our students at the events, and I was particularly impressed with their focus and drive in achieving their goals," said Dr. Higdon. "I met with one student who will pursue an internship at Microsoft and another who plans to transfer to Baylor University to pursue his doctorate in physical therapy."

Dr. Higdon expressed his admiration for the student veterans he met.

"Their stories of perseverance and grit were truly inspiring," he recalled. "It was fulfilling to see how the college has supported our veterans."

OTC Fine Arts presents "It's a Wonderful Life: A Live Radio Play" November 11, 2016

The OTC Fine Arts Department presented its annual holiday production of "It's a Wonderful Life: A Live Radio Play" at the Gillioz Theatre. The play was set in a 1940s radio studio theatre called WGLZ Playhouse of the Air where seven actors delivered all the lines from the classic film and created their own live sound effects. Guests were encouraged to dress in '40s attire for an immersive theatrical experience.

"I really enjoyed the challenge of performing in a radio play," said Eli Davidson, an OTC student actor who played the lead role of Jake Lawrence as George Bailey. "This production is something beyond film. It focused highly on the voice, so we had to use dynamics and inflection to help the audience members follow the story as if they lived back in 1947 and listened to the show on the radio."

Dr. Tracy McGrady was named OTC's provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs. She filled the position vacated by retiring Provost and Vice Chancellor Steven Bishop on Jan. 3, 2017. Dr. Bishop served the college since its beginning in 1991.

As provost, Dr. McGrady leads the instructional areas of the college including general education, technical education, allied health, business, online instruction and high school programs. The college's ancillary academic services – the tutoring and learning center, adult education and literacy, and disability support – also fall under her leadership.

"Today's higher education institutions rely on innovative and forward-thinking administrators," said Chancellor Hal Higdon. "Dr. McGrady's breadth of experience as both a higher education administrator and faculty member – in addition to her passion for student success – will prove invaluable to the college as she steps into this new role." ▲ Veteran students and staff gathered on the OTC Springfield Campus to celebrate their service on Veterans Day. ▼ Dr. Tracy McGrady was named provost.

Department of Labor awards $3 million to Springfield November 28, 2016

The City of Springfield's Department of Workforce Development and OTC were awarded a $3 million America's Promise grant by the U.S. Department of Labor. The grant will provide tuition-free training and certifications in health-related occupations for 372 individuals over the next four years. The U.S. Department of Labor awarded a total of 23 grants nationwide. Springfield was the only community in Missouri to receive one.

The grant will provide unemployed, underemployed and disadvantaged populations with access to highquality, tuition-free education and training opportunities, specifically in the healthcare fields of nursing and behavioral health support.

"The America's Promise grant will remove financial barriers for hundreds of students so they can graduate as nurses, behavioral health specialists or nursing assistants," said Dr. Steven Bishop, provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs at OTC. "The education they receive will prove invaluable to their futures, our communities, and ultimately, the people they serve."

Lauren Sweet starts each day with a smile. Why? Because she has her dream job.

A GIANT DREAM COME TRUE

any young children dream of working with animals when they grow up. OTC graduate Lauren Sweet is living that dream. She doesn't work with dogs, cats or even horses. Her animal of choice can grow to be 20 feet tall and weigh as much as a ton. Lauren's an assistant zookeeper and giraffe trainer at the Dickerson Park Zoo in Springfield.

"I dreamed about working at a zoo but I never dreamed of working with giraffes," said Lauren, who graduated from OTC last May with her Associate of Arts.

While she was homeschooled for 12 years, Lauren would take trips to the zoo and the Springfield Nature Center with her mother. When she was 12, she volunteered at Wonders of Wildlife in Springfield.

"I worked in the education center when it offered public programs. I loved working with the kids," she said.

Lauren attended OTC to take her general education courses. She knew right away that OTC was the place for her.

"It was very important for me to stay out of debt and get a really good education. And that's why OTC was the perfect choice," she said.

Lauren's duties at the zoo include working with different animals depending on which zookeepers need assistance that day in either the South American, Australian or African areas of the zoo.

She feeds animals in the morning and evening, cleans stalls and yards, does basic landscaping work, builds animal exhibits, and moves and weighs the animals. In addition to those duties, in her role as giraffe trainer, she teaches the animals to respond to stimuli like a ball on a stick that they must touch with their noses. When they complete the task successfully, Lauren gives the giraffes food to reward their behavior.

"You can't not be happy around giraffes. Anytime I work with them, they are happy to see me. So majestic," she said. Ken Harmon, senior zookeeper at the Dickerson Park Zoo said Lauren always "greets everyone with a smile and a positive, enthusiastic attitude, which is refreshing. She is always willing to help."

> No matter what is asked of her in her job at the zoo, Lauren is quick to oblige and does so with a smile.

> > "I'm getting paid to do what I've always dreamed of doing. I love my job," Lauren said.

And Lauren, who is pursuing a bachelor's degree at Missouri State, was able to make her dream come true by attending OTC.

"It's a no brainer," Lauren said. "If you're looking to save money and get your dream job, OTC is the place to go." After some detours and tours, Kevin Newton finished his degree at OTC and became a Battlefield firefighter.

answering HE CALL

attlefield firefighter Kevin Newton loves to talk about his job and the education he received at OTC. He often tells people that two days a week he lives in a multimillion-dollar house, drives a $500,000 vehicle and wears a $6,000 suit.

"Then I tell them, I'm a firefighter and you can become one too at OTC," Kevin said.

After growing up in central California, Kevin's parents moved to southwest Missouri where Kevin enrolled at OTC in 1998 to become a paramedic. Kevin's educational path had several interruptions and detours over the years. But after watching the New York firefighters run towards danger on 9-11, Kevin knew he wanted to become a firefighter.

"I found my calling then. I wanted to be a fireman," he said. First though, Kevin decided to serve his country and joined the U.S. Navy in 2003. He completed four tours of duty overseas as a Navy medic, serving with a U.S. Marine infantry unit in Iraq and then serving in Afghanistan.

"After my military service, I knew I had found my calling in fire service and enrolled again at OTC. I wanted to finish my associate degree in fire science," he said.

Kevin said he felt a little out of place coming back to school from a combat environment.

"I didn't know what I was getting into. I knew what firefighting entailed but not what a degree would look like," he said. "I heard Chief (OTC instructor Danny Whisler) made you work. He expected the best out of us. I was used to that in the military."

Whisler, the former Springfield fire chief and director of OTC's fire science technology program, said Kevin was looking for ways to put his military experience to work.

"Kevin worked hard, applied himself and became—not just a good student—but a real asset to the program. Kevin is a prime example of how OTC can assist our military personnel and help them put their experiences to work to benefit our community and become a qualified and respected professional."

While taking classes at OTC, Kevin was able to earn a position with the Battlefield Fire Department.

"I got to work for Battlefield while going through OTC's fire science program. Whisler told me they had a live-in residence program. Battlefield has a station that is empty and if you have the right credentials, you can live in it rent free, but you are required to be there 60 hours a week as a volunteer," he said.

In 2015, the department was hiring and selected Kevin, from the top of the candidate list, as its new full-time fireman. Now, Kevin and Whisler work together to give other OTC fire science graduates a shot at full-time firefighter work.

mothers' inspiration

tudents often show perseverance and grit as they overcome countless obstacles to reach graduation and the lucrative and fulfilling jobs that come with OTC degrees. Kristi Christian is a perfect example.

Kristi learned many lessons in her time at OTC. There were, of course, the lessons learned while working toward her dental hygiene degree. But, maybe more importantly, there were the lessons Kristi learned about life.

Before she began attending OTC, Kristi's support system was mainly her mother, Lucille.

"My mom was my biggest advocate. She was living across the street. She stayed with the kids when I worked overnight. I couldn't have done it without her," Kristi said, who was divorced with three young children.

To support her family, Kristi worked full-time stocking shelves on the overnight shift at Walmart. She also cleaned houses and businesses on weekends and her nights off. Her mother stayed with the kids at night while Kristi worked.

"I don't know how I did it," she said looking back on those days.

Kristi realized her schedule was not sustainable and she wanted to do something else with her life. The answer came to her one night while watching television.

"A commercial came on for OTC and it was scrolling all these programs offered at the college. Suddenly, dental hygiene came up and I sat up and said, 'Is that right? That's something I could go back to school for and not keep working at Walmart overnights.' I was ecstatic," she said.

After seeing the commercial, she came to OTC to get some more information. She walked out registered for classes.

Kristi, with the help of her mom, juggled all of the responsibilities she had as a student-parent:

attending classes, studying, working and taking care of the kids.

"Mom was there for everything. She would help me clean homes and business offices. She was watching my kids," Kristi said.

Kristi would take her kids to school in the morning, then head to OTC to take her classes. She only slept three hours a day, usually from 6-9 at night, and sometimes, during a break in her classes.

But everything changed in 2011 when Lucille was diagnosed with lung cancer.

"I was numb. How was I going to continue going to school? She was my strongest supporter. It was tough," Kristi said.

In 2011, just before Thanksgiving, Lucille died.

"I was thankful her struggle had ended, but I knew a different journey was ahead for my kids and me," Kristi said.

Enter Kristi's other support group – her dental hygiene family.

"I had to keep going. I had to finish. I was so close. The instructors, classmates, everyone was so encouraging. I couldn't have done it without them," she said.

"Every single one of them was like family to me. I lost my mom, but I gained a whole bunch of other people."

And when Kristi received her degree in May 2012, she knew who would be watching her.

"I walked across that stage and I just looked up and I said, 'We did it mom. We did it.' I got through it," she said.

Since graduation, Kristi has gone to work for Dr. Marshall Snodgrass at Our Dental Home in Marshfield. She's also recently re-married.

"Everybody goes through struggles. It's how you deal with those struggles that's going to make a difference and make you a stronger person in the end."

"Everybody goes through struggles. It's how you deal with those struggles that's going to make a difference and make you a stronger person in the end."

Kristi Christian honored her mother's memory by finishing her OTC degree and making a better life for herself and her children. zarks Technical Community College prides itself on offering degrees that directly lead to employment. OTC students head straight into jobs as welders, nurses and mechanics, and now, you can add concert promoter to that list as well.

OTC business student Victor Mitchell never thought the plan he developed for a class would lead to a career, but Victor is now the owner of Futuristic Entertainment, which promotes and stages music events in Springfield. It was a simple assignment in Victor's business principles class two years ago that sparked the idea.

"We were told to develop plans for three different-sized businesses. I picked entertainment management as my large business." Victor said. "Once I started pitching the idea to people, I said to myself, 'I kind of like this.'"

From then on, Victor began booking shows at the downtown Regency and the Outland Ballroom. With his musical background playing drums for his church – James River Assembly of God – and at home, he worked to build the local hip-hop and rap music scene. "If I was going to build the hip-hop scene, and do it right, I knew I was going to have to do it myself," he said. "I choose who goes on my stage and try to keep the message positive."

So far, his company has been a big success. His last show in late August at the Regency drew an audience of 500. "It did very, very well," Victor said. "I like the diversity of music styles I bring together by booking a rock band with hip-hop sometimes."

A graduate of Kickapoo High School, the 24-year-old is scheduled to graduate from OTC this spring with an associate degree in Business Management and plans to transfer to Missouri State University to work on his four-year degree in business.

"OTC has been beneficial to me in getting where I am today," he said. "It helped spark ideas in me and one idea sparks another to the point where I said, 'Hey, I want success.'"

Victor said people in the community appreciate his business's mission.

"They want to see positivity when they come into the arena. I want to change rap and hip-hop into a positive vibe. Right now, that music has a negative connotation," he said. "There's a lot of diversity in music in the area. That's something to celebrate."

What started as a class project at OTC has become an exciting business venture for a motivated Victor Mitchell.

udy Breeding may be small in stature but she has played a big role in serving as one of OTC's most passionate supporters.

A native of Houston, Mo., Judy worked as an accountant for more than 30 years. She began her career at BKD as the firm's first female certified public accountant (CPA) and later became its first female partner. Over the years, being a female in a male-dominated environment provided challenges. However, as Judy's husband of 42 years, Mike, will tell you, her never-quit attitude is what makes Judy who she is today.

"No challenge is too big or small for Judy. She'll take it on," he said.

In 2001, Judy brought her bold and resourceful leadership to OTC when she became a member of the OTC Foundation Board of Directors. As the longest tenured member of the board, Judy's role in developing financial support for the institution has become invaluable. When the foundation kickedoff its first capital campaign in 2008, Judy played an integral role as one of the campaign's co-chairs.

"I saw the economic need in southwest Missouri for something in addition to a traditional four-year college education. So many people we came in contact with wanted skills training or an affordable option for their first two years of college," she said.

Judy's support of OTC's students has extended beyond her service on the Foundation board. She and Mike established a named scholarship for women seeking an accounting degree at OTC.

"I believe in women breaking through that glass ceiling. I was a recipient of a scholarship, and it changed my life," she said.

It is this passion for investing in their community that has led the Breedings to include the OTC Foundation in their estate planning.

"Education is the best thing we can do for our community, and OTC is the best opportunity southwest Missouri has to improve the economic situation for so many people," she said.

First-Hand Experience

f you ask John Gentry for the key to success at his manufacturing company, Positronic, he will tell you it's a skilled workforce. Positronic, founded 50 years ago by John's father, Jack, has grown into a multi-national corporation that manufactures hightech electronic connectors and assemblies, which provide innovative solutions for military, aerospace and medical applications. When OTC came into the picture in 1990, Positronic was given the ability to strengthen its skilled workforce with a local solution.

"When OTC was founded 26 years ago, the college filled a need for skills and technical training for our Springfield region employees," John said.

Though the college was still in its infancy in 1993, OTC partnered with Positronic and the U.S. Department of Labor to create an apprenticeship program for both existing employees and high school students who wanted to be career-ready upon graduation.

"I was very pleased with the results. The workers felt pride in completing their training, and the skills they gained made our employees more valuable to the company," John said.

Upon experiencing first-hand the value OTC provides to local businesses, John strengthened his relationship with OTC two-fold. First, he gave financially to the OTC Foundation in order to increase the college's ability to serve students, the community and industry. Second, he joined the OTC Foundation Board of Directors. A few years later, John was elected to the OTC Board of Trustees.

At home, John receives plenty of encouragement to continue his support of the college's mission. His wife, Susan, is a strong advocate for education and understands the value OTC provides to the local community.

"Anything to do with education excites me," Susan said. "I believe strongly in the value of education. OTC fills a gap in this community. Continued learning only benefits the economic future of our region. It's exciting and energizing for John and I to be a part of the OTC mission."

▶ John and Susan Gentry are strong advocates for the college and generous donors. John serves on the OTC Board of Trustees.

GIVING BACK

Eric and Kathy Shade were married 27 years when Eric passed away from colon cancer in 2015. Kathy, a geology instructor at OTC, and her late husband, Eric, who taught computer science at Missouri State University, spent their careers educating students. Through their profession, they both saw first-hand the financial difficulties many students face.

Following Eric's passing, Kathy searched for the best way to honor his life, and continuing to help students reach their goals was the answer.

"Eric was passionate about helping students. I wanted to continue his legacy of making a difference by helping OTC students who need it the most," said Kathy.

Kathy was able to achieve that goal by making a memorial contribution to the OTC Foundation Student Emergency Fund, which offers assistance to OTC students who find themselves in a financial crisis. Many times, assistance from the Student Emergency Fund is the difference between a student staying in school or being forced to drop out.

"I know my contribution is going to directly affect students. I'm proud of that. And I know Eric would be too," said Kathy.
